Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Phi Beta Kappa: Alpha of Wisconsin; Catalogue Phi Beta Kappa embodies the spirit which is historically that of the American college - that of liberal education as distinguished from professional or technical training. It is the purpose of a liberal education to establish close and sympathetic relations between the student and human thought in its wider expression. It appeals to the deep-rooted love of knowledge for its own sake, which is never absent from the human heart. It cultivates and strengthens this love and directs it toward worthy and permanent objects. It finds those objects in the multiform expressions of human personality in letters, arts, and science, and it attempts to connect the life of the student with these as never-failing sources of pleasure and enrichment. As an honor society Phi Beta Kappa recognizes those students who have most conspicuously profited by their undergraduate course and so give promise of having fairly begun a liberal education. It gives this recognition not only to show honor to personal distinction in college work, but also to emphasize...
