One sister, who was living, aged thirty-three years, had tuberculosis. One sister died of carcinoma of the breast, aged thirty-eight years. Her paternal grandmother died of carcinoma of the breast. Previous History.--The patient had a mild attack of scarlet fever in infancy, a mild attack of diphtheria at the age of eight years, bronchopneumonia in childhood, 5 attacks of influenza and laryngitis every winter for 3 or 4 years. She began to menstruate at the age of twelve years. Her periods were fairly regular, once in 23 days. The flow lasted only 2 days. Habits.--Her appetite was poor. She had numerous dietary fads. She would not eat fruits, acids, or cucumbers, for example. She complained a good deal of indigestion. She was a total abstainer, except that she took some whiskey occasionally for medicine. She slept from 4 to 6 hours at...
